Basically how to optimally manage your waves early relating to junglers. Stuff like cheater recalls, when to crash each wave and why, I answered all of that in this video. I decided to make the video because it's one of the most important fundamentals of top lane and I haven't seen much content on it, also it's the stuff people mess up the most. Hope it helps, if you have anything you want to ask please feel free to.

Lastly forgive me if I rambled at all, it's incredibly hard to summarize this topic in a way that everyone will understand and I had a hard time doing so.

Actually a ton of good knowledge in here.

One thing I need to mention before I watch it entirely: Awesome hair!

Incredibly good video, I'm low elo and every bit of info counts, but so rarely I manage to find videos that are both comprehensible AND so densely complete of info. Thanks for this!

Hey man really nice video. Thanks for the time you put into it.

One question, do we ALWAYS prioritize helping scuttle instead of cheater recalling? Are there instances where we don't? I'm thinking about maybe if you're against a very bad early game toplaner (like Kayle), it's better to cheater recall to grab an item advantage on her and permafreeze her off the wave once it bounces back, no? If you can elaborate on this thanks a lot.

Another question. I main Kayle (sad maining Kayle in high elo), what can I do to counter this? I feel absolutely useless earlygame in the top lane and I've lost so many games on the first 3 levels because of my champion. What I've done is ALWAYS tell my jungler to start top side and play for bot but if he doesn't he's screwed because I can't help him. On top of that, most people will cheater recall on me (since it's free against Kayle) and then zone me off level 4 once the wave bounces back. What I normally do is ask my jungler to help me push but if he's on bot side (as I asked him), I'm screwed.

Subbed btw, very nice content.
