

Title: Should I waste ability cooldowns and mana for CS, wave management and dodging skill shots instead of dealing damage?

Score:

--- POST CONTENT ---

I realise that I'm missing free cs because I'm refusing to waste mana or long cooldowns on minions, and I'm also getting poked more in lane because I'm refusing to use my ability cooldowns to dodge skill shots. For the sole reason of being afraid of ganks and all ins after I use these abilities. This thus leads me into taking a lot of damage in lane and missing a lot of free CS that puts me at a disadvantage anyways. What should I be doing? Am I making the right decision? Or should I use abilities less sparingly to preserve HP and increase CS but as a consequence be more vulnerable to unfavourable all ins because I used my abilities on creeps and more vulnerable to ganks because I used my movement abilities to dodge skillshots?

--- TOP COMMENTS ---

[Comment 1 | Score: 21]

Don't use an ability if it will cause you to die, yes. If you don't know whether or not they can kill you after you use the ability, that's just a knowledge gap you need to fix, rather than playing passive to avoid confronting it in the first place

[Comment 2 | Score: 3]

For mid lane only! Wave management for top is very different.

Laning advantage comes in both wave and hp. So every time you spend mana, if you are doing at least one of pushing wave or hitting the champ, it's worth. Ideally do both at the same time. Mid lane is almost impossible to freeze so pushing wave will force the enemy champion to spend their ability on minions. This is how you build up mana, hp, and cs advantage.

[Comment 3 | Score: 2]

Who do u play? This is important, although I think if there are 2 minions and a cannon all about to die at similar times (let's say you're playing Xerath) and your Q and W are on CD from poking there's no problem with doing an Auto E Auto combo to secure minions. After you get the minions just back up and wait for your CD to be back. Then you're not gank able and you got CS. Then when minions get low again walk back up and auto them.

It's not ideal to not use abilities on minions, just use them strategically. If you're playing sylas try using Q to hit some minions that may die at the same time but while you hit the minions try to poke the enemy laner at the same time.

Also, you really need to use vision better if your constantly worried about being ganked or something. You can ward to help that out. And if you are pushed up and taking platings or something and they gank you botside walk along the top of your lane so it takes longer for them to get to you and don't try to fight unless you have to. Or if you have a stun or if you win easily. If you just walk or flash away if needed you'll be fine.

Lastly, using your abilities to dodge skill shots is NOT A BAD THING. Don't be afraid to use your abilities to dodge skill shots. Now I don't recommend doing it on every veigar Q but things like Lux Q, YES her Q can turn into a Q E R combo and ur done for. So don't use it on non major Skill Shots. Like a sylas E is a good one to use an ability to dodge cause u get CCed and he can pretty much stick to you after.

I assume you're talking about an assassin though since u mentioned dashes. But just an example.

[Comment 4 | Score: 2]

Basically the main thing you gotta do when using cds in the wave is make sure you aren't in danger of a counterattack. As an irelia player, i can tell you a lot of mages use their abilities on the wave and leave themselves completely vulnerable and often don't position themselves correctly or respect that they are incredibly weak without their abilities. If ur afraid of being dove and an ability won't clear the wave in time, try and save your abilities to protect yourself or go 1 for 1

[Comment 5 | Score: 2]

You should try different approaches and see what works for you. Play some games where freely use your abilities cs or trade and refine a plan based on what you took away.