

Title: I coached silver, gold and platinum players for a month, here are 20 easily fixable mistakes that almost all the players were making.

Score:

--- POST CONTENT ---

Hey, I'm Bonks, an EUW Master player that makes educational videos aimed at players mainly below diamond.

About a month ago I decided that I want to be a league coach, since it seems fun and I've always liked helping people in general.

Since then I've been practising by coaching some of my friends who's ranks range from about silver to plat, and the first thing I noticed was that the amount of griefing and toxicity in the chat was ridiculous. Like damn I do not remember it being this bad a few years ago, if you're genuinely making an effort to climb out of these ranks I have mad sympathy for you, must be a pain to deal with.

But I also noticed that whether I was coaching someone who was silver, gold, or plat, there were some mistakes that all the players were making that are ridiculously easy to fix once you know about them, so I thought I'd make a post/video about it.

By going through all the coaching session recordings again I came up with a list of 12 mistakes I was repeatedly seeing. I then got into contact with a few amateur coaches (mainly from proving grounds teams) and asked them if there are any mistakes they've repeatedly seen low elo players make in the time they've spent coaching.

After speaking to them, I managed to come up with a list of 20 frequently made, but easily fixable mistakes. I made a video going through those 20 mistakes and explaining what makes them mistakes and how you can fix some of the more confusing ones since thats kinda my style, but I'll leave a list of what the mistakes are here. The video is at the bottom if you're interested in the more detailed explanations and the advice I give

​

List:

- 1: Clicking too far away from your champion
2. Not judging how fights will turn out before you start moving to join them
3. Taking the first tower plate too early
4. Not making an effort to sync your recalls with your teammates recalls
5. Not looking at lane states while clearing your camps or moving between them (jungle only)
6. Roaming/leaving lane when your wave is pushing away from you
7. Holding on to 2 ward charges (just place them ffs)
8. Not shot calling for your team with pings
9. Making a mistake, then making the situation worse by trying to fix it instead of taking the small

loss

10. Not doing things with intention

11. Not retaliation trading

12. Not coming up with a gameplan in loading screen or champ select

13. Not thinking (30 seconds) ahead

14. Bad clearing skills (jungle only)

15. Freezing at an inappropriate time

16. Pushing at an inappropriate time

17. Not making crossmap plays

18. Blaming bad macro skills for not being able to climb

19. Blaming anything but yourself for a loss (whether its true or not)

20. Maining jungle, and not understanding how lanes work due to never playing them ever

21. (Bonus I just thought of) Being scared in lane when there's nothing to be scared of, to fix this you should start looking for windows to play aggressive and consider what the enemy has that actually threatens you, rather than just being scared by default.

​

For anyone interested in why these are mistakes, here's the video with better explanations. I believe its still got some helpful stuff in it even if you've seen this post (this is a completely unbiased opinion, trust me bro) I just put a list here in case you wanna reference it later

cheers lads :)