

Title: How do I punish bad wave management?

Score:

--- POST CONTENT ---

Let's say you're playing Fiora against Volibear. This volibear is non stop auto-ing the wave till it crashes to your tower. I know this isn't a good thing to do, but what can I do to punish him for it? My jungler rarely ever ganks and i end up getting frozen on for the majority of the laning phase.

--- TOP COMMENTS ---

[Comment 1 | Score: 100]

Crashing waves is a good thing to do. It gives you time to be able to recall and buy items, farm a jungle camp or rotate to a fight in another place.

[Comment 2 | Score: 61]

If your Jungler doesn't punish, then it's not bad of him. Pushing aggressively is a great strategy, it forces you under tower, gives Voli Prio, pressures your turret and you miss CS. When he pushes like this he's the one controlling the lane.

However as Fio you can duel him, so why not just force a fight and run him down and then freeze on him? Or ping Jungle to gank?

[Comment 3 | Score: 21]

If the Volibear is perma pushing lane, you need to trade with him when his abilities are on cd/when he attacks the wave. You can't manipulate the wave if you can't outrade him to begin with.

If you can't trade with him and he's perma pushing lane, then ur jungler is the only one who can punish him.

Taking junglers out of the equation, perma pushing is only interesting if he can't outrade you and can't commit the wave to crash.

Punishing bad wave control is more obvious with resetting when the wave is in the incorrect position and maximizing the opportunity cost through that. For example you cheater recall vs a poor waveclear top like Camille. She doesn't clear the wave in time and it's slowpushing away from her. You simply just hold the freeze when u get back into lane.

[Comment 4 | Score: 12]

Don't let the voli non stop auto the wave, he can't auto the wave over and over again if you actually trade with him. Also, which one is it? Are you getting frozen on or is he pushing waves into your tower? Two very different things. Him pushing every wave isn't terrible for you if you can farm well, and Fiora scales way harder than volibear

[Comment 5 | Score: 7]

I think you have a misunderstanding of "bad wave management". Good wave management differs greatly depending on champion, game state, opponent, and other factors.

To answer your direct question, YOU can't really punish perms pushing voli, cause you need to remain under tower to catch wave. Your jg should get easy tank and punish it for you. If that never happens then honestly it's great wave management by voli