

Title: is 10cs/min actually realistic or just something streamers say been experimenting with yone top recently (still figuring out the whole top lane thing), currently sitting in silver 2. keep hearing content creators mention hitting 10cs/min like its standard but idk if thats even doable when lane goes south i'm sitting at like barely anything by 15 minutes and there's no real way to recover from being that behind even in games where i'm ahead and constantly pushing waves i max out around 8cs/min definitely see the connection between farm and winning but my average is probably closer to 6cs/min which feels pretty rough is this one of those things where you need to be way higher ranked to actually pull off or am i missing something obvious about wave management
