

Title: If you want to get good at mid : Play Orianna

Score:

--- POST CONTENT ---

Guys, this champion is literally mid-lane school. It has everything : Good wave control, poke, scaling, CC, shield

Last but not least, your skill on this champion is HIGHLY correlated to your fundamentals. What makes a good Orianna ? Having good wave management, good cs, good positioning on lane and good map vision.

On some champion like Malzahar, you can have good results by applying a basic strategy : Shave Shave Shave, and without thinking too much about fundamentals.

With Orianna, you will have to rely on your fundamentals, and you will get hard punished if you misplay them.

​

So guys, the best advice I can give you to become good at mid is to play Orianna, and try to improve as an Orianna player !

--- TOP COMMENTS ---

[Comment 1 | Score: 737]

some people are missing the point of the post...

[Comment 2 | Score: 120]

Ah yes the shave technique. Malzahar is smooth like a baby's bottom

[Comment 3 | Score: 363]

Again guys, if you play assassins, you will get a lot of kills very easily, just by doing a combo. It'll not teach you midlane, it will teach you a combo.

A lot of low-elo hard stuck are playing champ like Yasuo/Zed/Fizz/Lee Sin in the mid lane. They get a lot of kills just by applying a combo and it gives them a lot of rewards, then, they think they are doing good.

​

With Orianna, there is no free solo kill in your midlane. Every misplay is a death against lane bully. It's the hard way to learn.

[Comment 4 | Score: 232]

That's actually what I'm doing rn. I'm used to playing Vladimir who can get away with poor trading and overall laning but Orianna punishes mistakes and has a lot of skill expression. I main adc and even I struggle spacing with her

[Comment 5 | Score: 182]

People here seem to not play midlane, this guy is right!

"Oh, play Annie" yeah, but Annie has a lot of tools to mitigate you being dogshit and has terrible wave control tools.

"Oh. Ahri" ahri is an assassin, not a mage. She has no value if she is slightly behind.

"Oh, play a high skill cap champion"

No. The guy is right. Orianna is great for learning mid lane, and saying "you have to control the ball" makes you look bronze 3.

Syndra is great for learning a high burst mage, while TF is great for learning map awareness but can be played on the strategy of "shove and leave vision"

Orianna is really great at being a midlane mage, not op nor weak, this is why she has competitive presence since she was released!